RECORDS AND MEDALS AT THE OLYMPIC WINTER GAMES

UPDATE – FEBRUARY 2009

OLYMPIC MEDALS

From Chamonix in 1924 until St Moritz in 1928, the medal presentation ceremonies traditionally took place at the Games Closing Ceremony. Since 1932 in Lake Placid, the Olympic medals have been presented after each competition.

Today, many of the medals are presented at a special ceremony, generally in a historic place in the host city, decorated for the event. In Turin, 55 of the 84 presentations took place in the Piazza Castello, in the heart of the city.

According to the Olympic Charter¹, the medal for first place must be gold coloured, with at least 6 grams of fine gold. The two other medals are silver, for second place, and bronze, for third. In addition, the names of the medallists are placed permanently on display in the main stadium in which the Olympic Games are held. At the last Winter Games in Turin (2006), the medals were 120mm in diameter and 20mm thick. In total, there were 1,026 medals struck for these 2006 Games (342 of each metal). Some 873kg of metal was used: 2kg of gold, 167 silver and 704 bronze. In Turin, like in Salt Lake City in 2002, the reverse of the medals varied according to the sporting discipline and included 16 different artistic motifs.
